Sveriges Lantbruksuniversitet

Sveriges Lantbruksuniversitet (Swedish University of Agricultural Sciences), Uppsala, Sweden, is a fully recognised public non-profit-making Swedish university with the right to give undergraduate education and PhD education and to award undergraduate degrees and PhD degrees in all subjects.

The status of university is awarded by the Swedish Government to higher education institutions fulfilling certain criteria. The universities and other institutions of higher education for which the state has responsibility are set out in Appendix 1 in accordance to chapter 1, section 1 in the Higher Education Ordinance (1993:100)

(<http://www.hsv.se/lawsandregulations/thehighereducationordinance.4.5161b99123700c42b07ffe3981.html>).

Higher education institutions in Sweden have great autonomy in the organisation of studies, use of resources and general organisation. All educational activities are funded by the state.

Högskoleverket (The Swedish National Agency for Higher Education) is a central authority under the government responsible for matters relating to institutions of higher education in Sweden.
