

Happy Easter everybody!

I hope that you'll be able to take some days off, relax and enjoy the holiday.

In several other countries Easter is mostly a religious holiday, while in Sweden it's nowadays often associated with more non-religious activities (even though the number of people visiting churches to some extent is increasing during Easter). Eggs in different forms of course characterize Easter. We decorate with eggs, we eat eggs, we paint eggs, we (or especially our children) hunt for eggs. Due to several reasons, there is a lack of eggs in Sweden and in Europe now, so if you like to eat eggs, locally produced where the animals have been treated well, it's time to look around!

A little reminder:

Tomorrow it's Maundy Thursday, which means there is a 2-hour reduction in working hours.

News:

On Wednesday 19 April 10 - 11.30 I'll launch the first drop in for individual PhD-students at SLU who like to talk to the DO. There will be a digital waiting room if more than one person joins. One person at the time will be admitted. Passcode is PhDdropin.

Once again, I wish you a Happy Easter!

Monika
